EDITORIAL.

THE coming of the 'Tanks,' the spirit of the 'Great Push,' our success over enemy aircraft, have all combined to send us back this term with lighter hearts and brighter optimism than we have had for some time. In fact we are beginning to feel that the much talked of end of the war is a tangible reality and not a mere figment of the imagination.

Last term witnessed such a pleasing revival of the Corps that it may not be out of place to record it in a war-time Editorial. The spirit was revived not by the promise of "carrots" in the shape of exciting and interesting field-days, but by sheer hard work to get hold of new and somewhat intricate drill movements. It may have been interest in something new; possibly there was a certain amount of pride felt that we were doing work in common with our most famous regiments, "The Guards." Whatever motives led each member to work need not, however, be considered; sufficient for us to relate that the "Guards' Drill" accomplished much and will probably do more in the future.

A new shooting range is in process of construction; the existing butt is to be turned round to face south; the firing point is the hut which is being built just outside the east end of the football field. There will be, we understand, ample room for eight firers at a time, while at the back will be plenty of space for the musketry officer and for those not firing at the moment. A small armoury completes what promises to be a very useful and efficient adjunct to the Corps, for which we have to thank old cadets who have gained "Certificate A," since the range is being built with the money the War Office allows for everyone who, having passed this examination, takes a commission in the Territorials.

ROLL OF HONOUR.

KILLED IN ACTION.

HENRY FAVILL SCOTT-HOLMES, who was a 2nd Lieutenant in the Norfolk Divisional Royal Engineers, was killed in action on July 1st. Born on March 15th, 1894, he entered the School in September, 1905, and left in April, 1907. After leaving School he went in for Engineering, and, when war broke out, was on the eve of getting a good appointment with the Norwich Electric Tramway Company. He enlisted on August 5th, 1914, in the Norfolk Regiment, as Transport Driver, where he served for five months. He was then offered a commission and was gazetted to the Norfolk Regiment in January, 1915, but in March, 1915, he obtained a transfer to the Norfolk Divisional Royal Engineers, with whom he went to France in January, 1916. He fell at the opening of the Battle of the Somme on July 1st, leading his men in the face of a heavy fire.

WALTER LEONARD GISSING, who was a Rifleman in the London Regiment, was killed in action on July 1st. Born on December 10th, 1891, he entered the School in September, 1902, and left in July, 1908. On leaving School he studied architecture with Mr. Grimson, of Sapperton, near Cirencester, Gloucestershire. In 1912 he became connected with the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings, and undertook the repairing of several interesting places, such as Mount Grace Priory, Pontefract Castle, and many ancient churches in different parts of the country, including Ranworth Church in Norfolk. Later, he became a Member of the Society. He enlisted in the London Regiment in October, 1915, and went to France in May, 1916. He fell at the Battle of the Somme on July 1st.

HENRY BRANFILL RUSSELL, who was a Lieutenant in the Essex Regiment, was killed in action on July 11th. Born on November 10th, 1894, he entered the School in September, 1908, and left in July, 1913. He was up at New College, Oxford, for the Lent and Midsummer Terms of 1914, but when war broke out he quickly applied for a commission and was gazetted to the Essex Regiment. In September, 1915, he sailed to the Mediterranean. He was in Lemnos for some weeks and then went to Suvla Bay. On the evacuation he was sent to Cape Helles, where he remained in the trenches until the final evacuation. After a few weeks in Egypt he was sent to France in April, and in May was gazetted Lieutenant. He was severely wounded by a shell at the Battle of the Somme on July 11th, and died the same day at the Hospital at Gezincourt.

GEORGE DAWSON HOPE ATKIN, who was a 2nd Lieutenant in the King's (Liverpool) Regiment, was wounded on July 15th and died on the following day. Born on July 31st, 1896, he entered the School in May, 1911, and left in December, 1914. He obtained his commission in January, 1915, and was gazetted to the King's. He went to the front in April, 1915, and was in the Battle of Festubert at the beginning of May. During the following year he occupied various positions, being at one time Reserve Lewis Machine Gun Officer and at another Intelligence Officer to the battalion. He was severely wounded by shrapnel at High Wood, in the Battle of the Somme, on July 15th, when in charge of his platoon, and died on the following day.

MARK CARR HILL, who was a Lieutenant in the Leicestershire Regiment, was killed in action on July 16th. Born on April 12th, 1894, he entered the School in May, 1906, and left in July, 1913. He was Captain of his House and a School Prefect. He went up to Magdalene College, Cambridge, in October, 1913. He got his commission in August, 1914, and was later gazetted to the Leicestershire Regiment. He was promoted Lieutenant in October, 1914. He went out to France in August, 1915, and was wounded by a sniper's bullet in October. He rejoined his old battalion again at the beginning of February, 1916, and was killed in the Battle of the Somme, near Monchy, on July 16th.

DOUGLAS BIRCH RICHARDSON, who was a Captain in the Royal Flying Corps, was killed in action on July 29th. Born on June 22nd, 1892, he entered the School in May, 1907, and left in July, 1910. On leaving School he studied Engineering at the Liverpool Institute for three years. He passed the first examination for the M.I.C.E. before he was 21, and then went into the firm of Binnie and Deacon in London, by whom he was put on to the new water-piping at Corwen in North Wales. He had joined the Cheshire Field Company Royal Engineers in 1913 and was in camp when war was declared. He got his second star in August, 1914. He went out to France in November, 1914, and was invalided home in May, 1915. He later joined the Royal Flying Corps, and got his wings in February, 1916. He went out to France again in March, and was promoted Captain on June 22nd. He was also a Flight Commander.

COSMO LEWIS DUFF-GORDON, who was a Lieutenant in the Herefordshire Regiment and attached to the Machine Gun Corps, was killed in action on September 3rd. Born on March 3rd, 1897, he entered the School in January, 1911, and left in July, 1914. He was gazetted to the Herefordshire Regiment in September, ber, 1914, and joined the Machine Gun Corps in May, 1916. He went out to France at the beginning of August and was killed at the battle of Guillemont on September 3rd, whilst leading his men into action.

MILITARY CROSS.

A. L. Crockford, 2nd Lieut., Gloucestershire Regiment.

"For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He went to the assistance of a working party which had lost its officers, and later, when our ammunition was running short, organised carrying parties, cleared the way for them under heavy machine-gun fire, and succeeded in getting ammunition through. He was twice knocked over by the blast of shells."

A. H. Graves, 2nd Lieut., Machine Gun Corps.

"For conspicuous gallantry in action. Under heavy fire he brought his guns into action to repel a sudden attack at close quarters. On many occasions he has shown great bravery in attack."

Arthur Charles Sotheron Estcourt, Lieut., Gloucestershire Regiment.

"He fought his battery with great effect under very heavy fire during the attack, dispersing many enemy bombing parties. He also knocked out a machine gun which was holding up the advance of our bombing parties."

MILITARY MEDAL.

Archer Bowles Neal, Pte., Coldstream Guards.

FROM THE FRONT.

I have been on one bomb raid so far. It was a never-to-be-forgotten experience. There were our bombing machines and escorts and we all made a wonderful picture flying in a bunch. On crossing the lines we all got our share of "Archie," though no one was actually hit. And then came the releasing of our bombs. It was difficult to see whether they did much damage owing to clouds. And in the end comes the journey home. It is a really lovely sensation, landing after a bomb raid.

R.S.H.

Though we are some miles from the line the roar of the guns is almost deafening at times and has not ceased for an hour during the last four weeks. It is almost impossible to conceive the number of shells that are fired every day. One thing is certain—the German is a wonderful fighter if he can stand the bombardment much longer. I have been in a Hun barrage of 5.9 and heavy shrapnel for twenty-four hours, and it was not a quarter as intense as what we are giving the Huns night and day without ceasing. Everybody is very confident about the success of the push. We have got the ascendancy over the German in munitions—here at least, and are getting it in men.

The most remarkable sight I have seen was three weeks ago, just before we made an attack, when a number of Germans gave themselves up. You have probably read accounts of the type of country we are fighting in. It is all undulating with quite a number of big woods scattered over the landscape, and in the centre of each wood is a spire, denoting a village. Our front line was on the crest of one of these slopes and you could see for about three hundred yards in front before the next dip hid the German trenches from sight. Suddenly there was a shout from someone "They're coming over in hundreds." Immediately everyone looked over the parapet, and some way to our left we could see a long string of Germans without arms and equipment coming down a communication trench towards our lines. Some of our bombers had found them weeping and crying "Merci Kamerad"—they actually wept! And then the German artillery began to shell them with shrapnel, and the prisoners did not waste much time in coming over. As they passed us they looked a very unhappy crowd. The men kept on muttering "Krieg ist nicht gut," while others seemed rather pleased to be out of it.

A. H. G.

I had the door of my dug-out blown in on one occasion, but came out without a scratch. We have also had a gas attack and quite a considerable bombardment. Our gas helmets are very good though, and the effect of the gas was surprisingly little. The men are really splendid and only grumble when there is really nothing to grumble at! Their cheerfulness "varies inversely as" their comfort—the less comfortable the more cheerful.

C. A. M.

On the 10th of July they rushed us up to Ovillers. Going over the ridge between Crucifix Corner and La Boisselle was a wonderful experience. It was a fine summer evening and, as one topped the ridge, a splendid and awful sight presented itself. For miles, as far as the eye could see, there stretched a countryside so blasted and scoured that no native could have recognised it. Mile upon mile, acre upon acre, of captured trenches sprawled white and battered. Beneath was La Boisselle, a few stumps of trees and mounds of bricks. To the left over the skyline the shells were spraying Contalmaison and Pozieres; and in the foreground, in front of our own old lines of squalid trenches, was a ghastly No Man's Land, simply thick with our dead—English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh—they lay in lines and clumps, one of the most pitiful sights I ever saw.

Our attack was successful; two companies rushed the Boche and gained their objective. For four days and nights we held our own in the middle of Ovillers. The enemy tried to rout us out three times, but failed. It was a very trying business altogether and when, on the night of the fifth, we were ordered to create a diversion to assist our attack on Contalmaison, we were not enthusiastic. However, we diverted ourselves as ordered, bombing along communication trenches.

G. H.

I have found Physics very useful on this job. "Electricity" comes in very useful with telephones, when they go wrong, and also with "induction," which often upsets switchboards, made of cartridge cases and clips. Ventilation of deep dug-outs is quite a problem in "convection," especially when there is a sap between the said dug-out and the cook-house, which the smoke from the latter prefers to the chimney. It is surprising what a difference atmospheric conditions make to shooting. If you fire off a round at midday and another at midnight the latter will often drop 100 to 200 yards short, if no corrections are made.

W. W. J.

I joined this squadron when it had been out here about three weeks, and it is only just recently that we have settled down to really hard work. We are an unusual squadron, being the only one out here with a certain type of machine which has just been brought into use. They are proving very satisfactory, and the O.C. R.F.C. came round and congratulated us personally, so I suppose we must have been doing fairly well. We spend most of our time in bombing the Huns, which is fairly easy compared to other things. They never seem to venture over our lines at all, at least not one has been seen anywhere near here for weeks. However they are thick enough on their side, but whenever they see us approaching in formation (i.e., flock flying) they always make East as if they were off to Japan.

This morning we bombed — but my bombs would not be released for a very long time, so by the time I had hit my mark the rest of our machines were miles away. The Huns, three in number, who had kept out of sight, when we were in strength, came up and attacked me from behind, hitting me, or rather my machine, before I knew they were anywhere near! I immediately turned round to face them, which is the only thing to do under the circumstances, upon which two of them turned tail and fled. The third came at me and I went for him until we got within about 100 yards and then he sheered off as well. I had had quite enough of it and so turned round and made for home also. I think I must have hit him, but one never can tell, you know. He did not seem disabled in any way, but I had my sights dead on him. I was "Archied" badly all the way back, making very small progress, as there was a strong wind against me. The German "Archies" don't seem to be as good as ours.

Our men are splendid, and deserve every praise, just as much as those in the trenches. Their hours are from about 3.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. almost continuous. Everything depends upon them, and if they were careless there would be a pilot's life at stake, as they have to repair and, sometimes, rebuild the machines. They take an enormous amount of looking after, as every machine at the end of a flight has to be overhauled and parts repaired, often taking hours on end. One of our sergeants has had no sleep for about five days now.

R. H. J.

About a week ago, for instance, I was despatched with 20 gunners to take command of two 6-inch howitzers, while the battery to whom they belonged went down to the far South. We were not relieved by the new battery coming into the position for four days, during which time we were absolutely cut off from everywhere except headquarters, and were entirely on our own. The evening before we were relieved, we had to shoot at a point just behind the Boche front line and about 200 yards from our own. I worked the battery by telephone from the forward observation post, and I think one of the greatest moments of relief I have ever experienced was when the first shell (100lbs. of H.E.) burst in the German lines and not anywhere near our own. It was really hardly surprising as I had worked out all my corrections at least four times beforehand, and had measured the map range quite as many, but after one has been within 10 yards of a 6in. H.E. shell when it burst, and has seen the damage caused, it makes one feel rather nervous in the first shoot that one has ever actually been in command. I have had one or two exciting walks up to forward observation stations; not the least exciting of which was the first when our Major, another subaltern and I were walking down a road arguing heatedly about the direction of a certain observation post which we had not before visited and which was apparently about 10 miles from the battery position. The particular O.P. we were looking for was about 300 yards from our front line and 700 from the Boche's front line, so we were intending to be very careful in approaching it. Owing to being wrongly directed, however, we marched gaily down the road in full view of the Boche's front line, holding the heated argument mentioned above. We were greeted with machine gun fire, but luckily for us the two machine guns turned on us were very badly aimed and missed us by about 20 yards. We were lying flat in the ditch in the road in about 10 seconds and about two hours later we were to be seen crawling out of the end of that ditch under cover of a hedge and a ton of mud. We found the O.P. shortly afterwards, but are still looking for the cheery subaltern who had assured us that he knew the way to the place we wanted perfectly. He may have known the way all right; we merely want to know if he had been that way himself.

M.C.H.

One who had been Captain of his House, a predecessor of Mark Hill, wrote in July:—"I think you and I know better than most people what an absolutely exceptional fellow Hill was."

Another contemporary of his writes: "Mark Hill's death was a great blow to me. He was one of the few men whom one feels the better for having known. His cheery personality was always a joy."

The keynote of his character was a rare simplicity. Entirely sincere and right-minded himself he had a happy belief in the sincerity and rightmindedness of others.

One was so sure of him that confidence in him could not seem to be misplaced, nor was it. One could count on what he would do under given circumstances and equally on what he would never do under any circumstances.

As Captain of his House he ploughed his furrow unswervingly, faithfully, straight, securing a silent and ready carrying out of his wishes. An order given to or by him was equivalent to its performance.

He must have made an excellent officer—for his juniors at school spoke always of his justice and all knew his courage and his thoroughness. His work as Editor of the Magazine is still the standard by which other Editors are measured.

Slow to seize a point of humour, he thoroughly enjoyed the effort and gave and felt much joy when he rippled to the surface, grasping it.

He had a great capacity for loyal friendship; and truth, such as is given to or won by few, was his; and his was the right to Bayard's device, 'Sans peur et sans reproche.'

FROM AN O.G. PRISONER OF WAR.

Our theatricals are all over; they were a great success. We gave six performances, so that everyone could come. The theatre belongs to the Russian officers, and they have fitted it up very well, but it only holds eighty. The programme was as follows:—

(1) A quartette, which sang two songs, unaccompanied—"Sweet and Low," and a quartette from Gilbert and Sullivan.

(2) A conjuring performance by a Lieut. Berry—really most excellent.

(3) Selections by the band, which we called "H.I.H. the Prince Lembombo's black Nicaraguan band." We were all blacked, with red mouths and white eyes, and wore shirts covered with imitation medals and orders, football shorts, and any other absurdity we could think of. There were fourteen of us, counting the conductor, Captain Massey, Cheshire Regt. Our selections were:—"I'll make a man of you," "Suzanne," "The Burglar's Dream," "British Grenadiers," "Georgia," "Tipperary" and "Angelina." We did all this in two appearances, and were encored every night. I blew the trombone ceaselessly until I had no wind left. Of course we brought in a lot of gagging and side-play, and the performance was a great success.

(4) A short sketch, "The Englishman in Paris," written by Lieut. Price, who is here.

(5) Sword dance and Highland fling by Captain Usher, of the Gordons.

(6) Songs by Captain Moseley, Munster Fusiliers.

(7) Short sketch, "The Frenchman in London," also by Lieut. Price.

(8) The band again.

(9) A potted play, which was a parody of a play that the Russians performed about six weeks ago. The parody was written by Lieut. Butler of the Manchesters.

On Saturday we gave a matinee as well as the evening performance, and I was from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the theatre, and covered with grease paint all the time! These entertainments are excellent things for everyone. One often feels that war time is not the time for amusements, but what we prisoners must do is to try and amuse each other, and keep people's minds away from dreary thoughts. Entertainments are not only good for the audience, but also for the actors. So many people forget that this time spent in captivity is just as much a part of their life as when they are at home—they seem to think it doesn't count. It is absurd to be in such a state of mind. This time is a most important one, and it has got to be used profitably for oneself and for others. That is my view, and I am sure it is a sound one. We have all got to keep fit and cheery, and the best way to do it is to have plenty of work, with games and amusements.

Yesterday we went for a most delightful walk. We started at 10 o'clock, and took our luncheon with us, and walked to a hill in the Taunus mountains, called the Capersburg, about half-way between here and Homburg. We arrived there at 12 o'clock. From 12 to 3 o'clock we wandered off by ourselves where we liked. I went up a hill, from where there was a glorious view. There I lay and talked and ate till it was time to re-assemble. We came back a longer way, and arrived in at 6 o'clock, having done 25 kilometres. I enjoyed it more than any day I have spent in captivity. I think I told you I have moved to a new room on the top floor, with a fine view. We are five in it; we run a small mess of three in the room, Capt. Rose Troup (of the Quecks), myself, and Lieut. Moyle, one of the new army officers, only recently captured. We are very comfortable, and satisfactorily installed. A tennis tournament starts to-morrow, and I am in it. I am as fit as a fiddle, weight 12st. 8—in pyjamas.

SPEECH DAY.

Speech Day was held this year on Saturday, July 29th. The Master of Magdalene (Dr. A. C. Benson) preached at the Service in the morning.

The prizes were distributed in the afternoon by Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C.

The Headmaster, in surveying the work of the School, said:—

Late in 1914 and still more so in 1915 many of us felt confident that to-day we should see such a rally of Old Boys as was never before seen at Holt, but now we must wait until 1917. In the meantime they are seldom out of our thoughts. It is difficult to speak of those who will never come, for words cannot be a measure of sorrow. We are deeply conscious of their gallant sacrifice and of our incalculable loss. We are proud, too, of those who have been mentioned in despatches and won distinctions, and we must be content to know that many more of our old boys have richly deserved them. Twice I have received gratifying tributes indicating the high esteem in which the War Office hold officers who have come from this school. And these Old Boys have clearly set a standard of which we are proud.

We have every right to be glad of the remarkable success of Baldwin and Wintringham in winning Scholarships at Balliol.

Turney ma. and Humphries are leaving us to join a Cadet Battalion. The former has proved himself an excellent and faithful captain of the school, and has crowned a successful career by winning a Mathematical Exhibition at St. John's College, Oxford. In Humphries the Corps loses an efficient and enthusiastic sergeant-major and captain of the VIII. In these two the school loses loyal prefects. We hope and think that Colyer will be as successful as Turner in getting into the R.E.

Major Miller is conscious, and I feel sure the whole Corps is as conscious as I, too, am, of the unremitting and stimulating work of his officers and of the response and support he has received from his N.C.O.'s.

Perhaps the most successful political speech ever uttered was made in ancient Greece. It consisted of nine words. The two candidates spoke from the same platform. The first spent an hour in telling the people what he proposed to do for them. The second candidate then stood up and said "What my rival has promised, I will do." He was elected. There have been in the last month or two many speeches made and many letters written demanding reforms in secondary education. Nearly all that has been proposed we have done. I make this apparently complacent statement to avail myself of this opportunity of acknowledging the enlightened educational policy of my governing body and of giving thanks where thanks are due. I am sure that it is your wish and my pleasure that I should express your thanks and mine to Sir Evelyn Wood for honouring us by coming among us to-day.

The Chairman of the Governors, Sir Edward Busk, who followed, said:—

"I should like to congratulate the School on the great support it has given to the country in the present War. Out of 456 past members of the Cadet Corps, who were eligible for military service, as many as 388 (or 85 per cent.) are actually serving. Of these 30 have been killed in action.

"Turning to the brighter side of the Report that I have to make I have the pleasure of recording that seven of our Old Boys have been awarded the Military Cross, one the Military Medal, while one has been appointed to the Ordre Militaire Francais, and ten have been mentioned in despatches. A very high military authority informs me that the number of these awards, as compared with the number serving, is exceptionally large and that the achievement is extremely creditable to the School.

"On behalf of the Governors I heartily congratulate the Headmaster and the staff and the boys on the high state of efficiency of the School and on the tone pervading it throughout.

"The Governors have awarded the Leaving Exhibition of £60 a year to G. L. Turney, who has already obtained a Mathematical Exhibition at St. John's College, Oxford. The Fishmongers' Company, on the report of the Examiners and the recommendation of the Headmaster, have awarded Open Scholarships of £50 a year, tenable at the School, to R. B. Shephard and P. W. Rolleston, and have resolved that I. Hepburn and E. P. C. Beck shall be marked as "proxime accesserunt."

"In accordance with the Examiner's Report no award has been made of County Scholarships and no Holt "A" Scholarships are vacant.

"In conclusion I wish to express my very great pleasure at the success of our Old Boys. In addition to Turney's success, P. H. Winttingham and R. M. Baldwin have gained Brakenbury Scholarships in History at Balliol College, Oxford, and W. T. K. Bräunholtz has gained a 1st Class in Part I. of the Natural Sciences Tripos at Cambridge. Three have passed into Woolwich, seven into Sandhurst (one, D. W. Jacques, with a Prize Cadetship), and one has obtained a R.N. Cadetship.

Sir Evelyn Wood, after distributing the prizes, said:—

It would be useless for me to repeat the words of wisdom you have heard from your instructors during the term on your scholastic studies. It would be impossible for me to improve upon the exquisite teaching given at the morning and evening services at the Opening of the Chapel on the 23rd of January. I shall best therefore show my appreciation of the compliment to me implied in the invitation of the Governors to address you by telling you what I think, speaking as an old man, will be the most useful goal for your efforts.

Let me make myself clear at the outset in dealing with the importance of telling the truth. I do not imply that it has ever been wanting here, but I daily think that our principal enemy in the War has lost much effective sympathy by his want of truth, and of Christian humanity.

I cannot accept the views sometimes expounded from pulpits that the War with all its appalling scenes is a God-given punishment for all our sins. Such denunciations appear to me to be wrong, for they leave out of account that, however sinful we may have been, it is mainly the women, children and non-combatants of Belgium, who have suffered unspeakable outrages at the hands of our enemies. I think that we should accept inscrutable decrees of the Almighty, for time only can show why such violations of Christ's teaching are permitted.

I said at a recruiting meeting in London in September, 1914, that I hoped the War would deepen the sense of self-sacrifice and love of country. It has done so, and much more than paying the debt due (summarised by Ruskin as a debt of industry and honour), evoking from England's children beyond the seas an enthusiastic love greater than that of life.

Death has taken the toll of many Gresham boys who have fallen in different countries. They are gone, but in imagination are

"More sacred than in life, and lovelier far
For having perished in the front of war."

I have had many letters from parents whose sons have fallen, letters breathing a noble spirit of patriotism and resignation. In this welter of world-wide bloodshed our nation has risen to the heights of fine ideals to which our efforts are dedicated.

There are few of us present whose names will be remembered for more than one or two generations, but everyone who honestly does his duty in life adds to the stability of the Empire; everyone who tells the truth and practises self-denial raises the standard of our daily life, and without religion and a high standard no Empire can stand.

Boys, you have the world before you. Remember, even if you serve the Empire under arms, that in war you will never meet so subtle and persistent an enemy as self. Those of you who can conquer self and succeed in living a nobler life will be guiding stars to the Gresham boys of the future. The more everyone of us, old and young, lives up to a higher ideal than his own nature, the better it will be for his own individual happiness, for our King, and for our Country. I end by quoting from the old Scotch hymn writer, Horatius Bonar:

“Speake truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.”

THE SHAKESPEARE SOCIETY.

A CRITICAL APPRECIATION.

The first fruits of the Society's activities took the form of a selection of scenes from Shakespeare, acted without costume on Saturday, July 22nd. The scenes had been chosen and the parts allotted by houses acting separately, an arrangement which made for convenience in rehearsal. No little courage was shown in the choice of scenes, some of which were decidedly difficult, especially in view of the fact that actors and stage-managers were almost entirely inexperienced; extraneous assistance in stage management was invoked only in very small degree. It is, therefore, the more pleasing to record the fact that the programme was carried through with great success. The words were given with clearness and intelligence, and the acting was generally adequate. Of the lighter pieces perhaps the best was the scene from Henry V., in which Darlow created a clear, if somewhat melodramatic, impression of a would-be truculent villain, while Hepburn revealed a considerable sense of humour. One of the best bits of acting was that of Muller as old Gobbo; his blind movements and slowness of comprehension made an excellent foil to Lancelot's sprightliness and abundance of facial expression. The Shepherd and Clown of the Winter's Tale deserve to be highly commended for their skilful handling of a stage baby, as also for adequate rendering of their lines. The scene from "Much Ado," though welcomed for its cheerful fooling, did not throw any fresh light on the character of Dogberry. It is possible that scenes which are so obviously amusing are the hardest to act well; the actor is in such a hurry to be funny that he does not stop to realise the character. One felt that a constable who is so slow of understanding should be far less lively in movement. Yates was much more successful as Clarence, where he showed depth of feeling and imagination; this combined with his excellent articulation to make the audience realise the "ugly sights" that he described.

The Kenwyn actors were very happily inspired in their selection from the Merchant of Venice, varied by a pleasing musical interlude, when "O! who will o'er the Downs so free?" was charmingly sung behind the scenes by a small but obviously well-trained choir. Colyer's "Shylock" was perhaps more true to the Shylock of Shakespeare's own day than to the more subtle and sympathetic rendering to which our modern actors have accustomed us; but, if lacking in subtlety and variety, Colyer was vigorous and virile. Noteworthy also was the sly malice with which Calvert invested Tubal, and the lively and natural bearing of Phelps as Lorenzo.

Apart from the "Much Ado" scene, Farfield also furnished a full stage for the scene from "Julius Cæsar," in which Gripper's Calpurnia was the outstanding figure; he always spoke with intelligence, and his voice was clearer than when he played the Sexton. Julius Cæsar was not convincing; surely his opening lines should convey wonder and curiosity rather than fear; the true keynote is to be found in the later words which he addresses to Calpurnia.

"Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,

It seems to me most strange that men should fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come."

Wilson was more successful as Hubert, the very difficult part of Arthur being played by Bell, who was most natural in his movements; perhaps his tone was argumentative rather than pleading, but he spoke his lines with unfailing intelligence and his elocution was beyond praise.

The entire programme was repeated on Speech Day in the following order:—

INSPECTION.

The Corps was inspected on Saturday, July 22nd, by Brigadier-General R. N. Smyth, D.S.O., who was kind enough to judge the Straight Shield Competition at the same time. After the formal inspection of the Contingent and the march past the sergeants in turn put the Company through various movements in close order, which were well performed. The competition proper then began and was as usual keenly contested, but the rank of the inspecting officer seemed to affect the nerves of the various N.C.O.'s., for several were guilty of most elementary mistakes. This was especially noticeable in the skirmishing and in the fire orders. All teaching seemed to evaporate into thin air, and the results were very disappointing to the officers. Cadets must realise that smartness in close order drill is only of value when its effect is clearly shown in the precision of extended order. Great progress was made last term in company drill owing to the methods brought back by Mr. Partridge from Chelsea ; this can be still further improved, but our chief aim now must be to bring our field work up to the same standard.

The result of the competition was :—

(1) No. 2 platoon—Sgt. Turney.

(2) No. 1 platoon—Sgt.-Major Humphries.

(3) No. 3 platoon—Sgt. Heyworth.

No. 2 platoon are to be all the more congratulated on their success, because Sgt. Turney was absent through illness and the command devolved on Corporal MacDermott, who handled his men well.

G. R. THOMPSON.

O.G. NEWS.

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Hill from Lieut.-Col. G. C. Challoner, with regard to the death of her son:—

“He was a very gallant officer, and set a magnificent example to his men, and is a very great loss to the Regiment. The battalion fought with the greatest gallantry, but I fear our losses are heavy. I know you have given one son, and it is hard that this second loss should fall on you. It may, however, be some small consolation to you to know how much your son will be missed and mourned by those of us who are left, and I will ask you to receive on his behalf my deepest gratitude for the splendid services he has rendered to his Regiment and his Country.”

The following is an extract from a letter which Mr. Duff-Gordon has received from the officer who was commanding his son's company:—

“He was killed whilst leading his men into action on the morning of September 3rd. At the time of his death he was leading a machine gun team in the attack. One of the team was wounded and your son stayed and bandaged him up. After doing this he took the tripod which the wounded man had been carrying, and was just starting to carry it himself when he was hit. Although only with this company for a short time the men recognised in him a leader, and we are all very sorry to have lost him. He was exceedingly cool in face of danger and thought always of his men first.”

With regard to the death of H. F. Scott-Holmes, the Sergeant-Major of his company wrote:—

“He was one of the best, and did not seem to know what fear meant. On one occasion he went and moved one of our drivers, who had been wounded, from a very hot spot. In fact he always seemed to think of other chaps first.”

With regard to the death of G. D. H. Atkin a correspondent writes:—

“It was at High Wood and he was trying to make better cover by connecting up a number of shell holes with trenches, and it was while attempting this work that he was hit by shrapnel in several places. His men wanted to carry him back, but, as this meant their going over the open, he would not let them. He walked some way, but had to give in and was carried the remainder of the distance. It is probable that the head wounds caused concussion, from which he died about 30 hours later. We have heard from many how devoted his men were to him. Though he was so strict and determined to have his team smart (it was second only to an Indian one) he was more like a brother than an officer; he gave nearly his whole time to them and was always teaching them, always trying to make them keen on their work. One man said, ‘We would far rather be in the trenches with Mr. Atkin than in billets.’”

Flight-Commander H. A. Busk, who was reported "missing" early in the year, has now been officially reported "killed in action," but we understand that there are, notwithstanding, grounds for hoping that he may still be alive.

G. R. Barratt, who was reported "missing" since July 7th, was buried by a shell, when some others were killed. When he was got out he was found to be unconscious. The particular spot where this happened had to be abandoned; since then nothing has been heard of him.

J. M. Foster, who was reported "missing" since July 23rd, was hit by a bullet above the eye when leading his platoon. Two of his men dressed his wound and bandaged him, and lifted him into a shell hole, but he had vanished when the search party went out after the action was over. It was known that the Germans had taken some of our wounded. Since then nothing has been heard of him.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The School has lost a good friend in the death of Sir Richard Biddulph Martin, Bart., who was a Governor of the School for many years. He was Prime Warden of the Fishmongers' Company and Chairman of the Governors at the time that the rebuilding of the School was decided upon, and took a deep interest in its subsequent growth and development. He had also been Honorary Treasurer of the Chapel Fund since July, 1913.

It was with deep regret that we learnt that Mr. G. R. Day, who was a Lieutenant in the Bedfordshire Regiment, had been killed in action. He was a Master at Gresham's School from September, 1911, to July, 1912, when he was appointed to a Fellowship and History Lectureship at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. He enlisted at the beginning of the war, and later obtained a commission in the Bedfordshire Regiment. He was present at Suvla Bay, where he received four wounds. His jaw, which was broken in two places, was marvellously restored by Sir Frank Farmer. In July, 1916, he went out to the Western Front, attached to the Royal Warwickshire Regiment. On August 27th, when leading as temporary Captain, he was wounded in the arm, but pushed on till, an hour later, he was killed. He was an able and inspiring teacher, and was gifted with a keen sense of humour and an attractive personality. An officer, who occupied the next bed to him in hospital, spoke of his amazing fortitude in bearing intense suffering.

Captain A. K. Gilmour, King's Own Scottish Borderers, who was killed in action on August 15th, was in Mr. Eccles' house from September, 1904, to December, 1905, when he left and went to Westminster School.

A. J. Hanmer, who was a 2nd Lieutenant in the Buffs, and recently won the Military Cross, died on October 7th of wounds received in action on August 2nd. He was in Mr. Wynne Willson's house from January, 1908, to April, 1909, when he left and went to Tonbridge School. According to The Gazette, "He was in command of a party detailed to capture an advanced position. Having accomplished his task he continued to advance, bombing the enemy until he fell wounded."

Many Old Boys will be interested to know that Mr. C. W. Merryweather, who, on leaving Gresham's School, went to Manchester Grammar School as a Master, is a Captain in the Lancashire Fusiliers. He was wounded on January 4th, 1916, but is back again now with his battalion at the Front.

Major J. H. Foster is second in command of his Battalion, which is now in France.

Mr. W. I. Cooke left us at the end of last term to take up a post at Sedbergh School. We wish him all happiness and success in his new work.

We welcome Mr. A. Zaiman, of King's College, Cambridge, who has joined the Staff this term.

We congratulate Mr. W. E. Woodhouse upon his marriage with Miss Marjorie Parish, which took place on August 2nd, at St. Luke's Church, Chesterton, Cambridge.

We congratulate Captain Hammick upon his promotion.

The Bishop of Thetford will hold a Confirmation on Wednesday, Nov. 1st, at 11.30 a.m.

Mr. J. Sandeman Allen gave the School a very interesting lecture on "The Blockade" on Friday, July 14th.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of "The Gresham."

Dear Sir,

To meet the present deficit on the Chapel Building Fund it has been found necessary, as was explained in the last number of "The Gresham," to obtain a loan from Messrs. Barclay, at Holt. The balance in the various Funds, "Chapel," "War Memorial" and "School Seating" Funds, at any time, are credited against the loan, and on this account it seemed more convenient to have the "Old Boys' Fund," which was originally with Messrs. Barclay, at Aylsham, transferred to Holt, and this has recently been done. As the greater number of the cheques in the past have been sent to Holt in the first instance, this arrangement will also save postage. Old Boys are therefore asked to send their donations in future to me instead of to the Rev. F. Jarvis or the Rev. C. H. Fitch.

May I be allowed to express the hope that this arrangement will give me plenty of additional work!

I am,
Yours truly,
J. R. ECCLES.
